Speaking about
“1619: The Story of America’s First Documented Africans”

In 2019, Americans will celebrate the commemoration of the 400th anniversary of the first recorded Africans in English North America. In early records, these men, women and children were known as the “20 odd” Africans. They arrived in late August 1619 at Point Comfort, along the James River. This talk will offer details, documentation and importance of this history to communities nationwide.

Kerry Bryan in attendance as Lucretia Mott

Joe Becton, Antoine Watts and Crystal Kemp, musicians and USCT re-enactors, will lead a sing-along of Civil War era music.
